

YouTube Channels and Playlists for Learning Classical Piano

Top YouTube Channels

- Pianote (Classical Lessons) – Pianote offers a structured classical program taught by classically trained instructors. Its site highlights a “Classical Piano Quick Start” playlist of four free beginner lessons ¹ and a full beginner classical course (free with membership) ². These lessons cover posture, basic theory, and easy repertoire under expert guidance.
- Hoffman Academy – Hoffman Academy follows a traditional curriculum for beginners (both kids and adults). It claims to provide “the most complete foundation in music you can find online,” covering sight-reading, technique, and theory ³. In practice, Hoffman’s program includes hundreds of free video tutorials (their site notes over 100 lessons) and many exercises on their YouTube channel ³ ⁴. This makes it a great free resource for a step-by-step piano education from the very basics onward.
- Andrew Furmanczyk (Lypur) – Andrew Furmanczyk’s YouTube channel offers free piano courses that integrate music theory with playing. According to his site, he provides “several free courses” on piano and theory, and “all of his videos are free” ⁵. His upbeat lessons take learners from the absolute beginner level through early intermediate, making the channel suitable for students who want solid fundamentals in reading, technique, and theory ⁶.
- PianoVideoLessons (Lisa Popeil) – Lisa Popeil’s channel hosts the “Year One Complete Beginner Piano Course.” The course is broken into 6 units (96 lessons) covering music reading, basic technique, and simple classical tunes. The site emphasizes that “This entire Year One Beginner Piano Course is free to watch – a free complete beginner piano course designed by a professional teacher!” ⁷. This makes it a thorough, no-cost resource for adults starting piano from scratch.

Full-Course Playlists and Resources

- Pianote Classical Quick Start – As noted above, Pianote’s Classical Piano Quick Start playlist (four lessons) is designed for true beginners ¹. Completing these lessons prepares students to tackle more complex material.
- Hoffman Academy Lesson Units – Hoffman’s site organizes lessons into units (e.g. Unit 1 Lessons 1–20, Unit 2 Lessons 21–40, etc.). Each unit includes video lessons and practice assignments. In total Hoffman offers 400+ free piano lessons for beginners and intermediate players (as described on their site), covering everything from posture and first songs to elementary improvisation and reading ³.
- PianoVideoLessons (Year 1) – The Year 1 playlist itself (Units 1–6) is a complete curriculum of beginner lessons. It starts with learning the keyboard and simple tunes (Hot Cross Buns, etc.), then moves on to two-handed playing, new rhythms, and easy classics. Upon finishing Year 1, students can advance to higher units (chording, etudes, Baroque pieces) ⁷.
- Andrew Furmanczyk Playlists – Andrew’s channel includes series like “How to Play Piano” and “Music Theory” lessons. These playlists guide learners through reading music, chords, and technique. Because all his videos are free, students can follow these playlists continuously from beginner topics up through intermediate material ⁵.

- (Other notable classical-piano channels: Tiffany Poon, Josh Wright Piano TV, Sonata Secrets, and Tonebase all produce high-quality classical piano content. Although these channels are not structured “courses” per se, they offer tutorials on specific pieces and techniques that can supplement learning ⁵.)

Recommended Structured Courses

1. PianoVideoLessons – Year 1 Complete Course (Lisa Popeil) – A free, comprehensive beginner curriculum (6 units, 96 video lessons) ⁷. This course starts with basic note-reading and the first songs, and gradually introduces new concepts (hands-together playing, simple chords, rhythmic notation) in each unit. Because it is entirely free, it’s an excellent all-in-one course to take a novice through early classical repertoire.
2. Pianote – Classical Piano Course – A guided classical piano curriculum taught by Victoria Theodore. Pianote’s site advertises a beginner classical course pack (free with membership) and specifically a four-lesson Classical Piano Quick Start for absolute beginners ² ¹. Completing this course teaches students fundamental techniques and includes multiple iconic classical pieces broken into bite-sized exercises.
3. Hoffman Academy – Online Piano Lessons – A structured series of over 400 free video lessons for beginners (kids and adults) ³. Hoffman’s course starts with the very first song (Hot Cross Buns) and covers piano posture, reading notes, rhythms, pentascales, and simple compositions. Because it spans so many units, Hoffman provides a full syllabus from elementary to early intermediate levels, making it a complete free course for new classical pianists ³ ⁴.

Sources: Pianote’s official blog notes its free classical lessons ² ¹; a Moore Piano article reviews top piano-teaching channels (Hoffman Academy, Andrew Furmanczyk) ⁵ ³; and PianoVideoLessons’ site describes its free “Year One” course ⁷. These and other resources were used to identify comprehensive YouTube-based learning paths from beginner to advanced.

¹ ² Classical Piano for Beginners | Pianote - Free Online Lessons

<https://www.pianote.com/blog/beginners-classical-piano/>

³ ⁴ ⁵ ⁶ Six Great YouTube Channels for Learning Piano

<https://www.moorepiano.com/posts/six-great-youtube-channels-for-learning-piano>

⁷ Overview of Year One - (Beginner Piano Units 1-6) - Piano Video Lessons Courses

<https://courses.pianovideolessons.com/year-one-video-overview/>